FOREIGN MILITARY ASSISTANCE ACT REPORT TO CONGRESS
AUTHORIZED U.S. COMMERCIAL EXPORTS AND MILITARY ASSISTANCE,
FOREIGN MILITARY SALES, AND MILITARY IMPORTS:
FISCAL YEAR 1996

Introduction:

This report is being furnished in accordance with Section 655 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (as amended by Public Law 104-106). Section A of the attached report describes defense articles, services, and related technology licensed for export pursuant to Section 38 of the Arms Export Control Act (AECA). Section B details the deliveries of defense articles and services pursuant to Foreign Military Sales as allowed under Chapter 2 of the AECA and transfers authorized by grant under the FAA, or under any other provision of law, including excess defense articles (EDA), and IMET. Section C includes information regarding the types and total value of military articles imported into the United States during fiscal 1996 from foreign suppliers.

Section A of this report was provided by the Office of Defense Trade Controls at the Department of State. The information in Sections B and C of this report were provided by the Defense Security Assistance Agency (DSAA) and the Office of the Principal Deputy Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition and Technology), Defense Procurement (OUSD(A&T)DP). This report was assembled by the Department of State.

Section B Overview:

In fiscal 1996, the United States Government (USG) transferred a total of approximately $12 billion worth of military equipment--including aircraft, ships, ground force equipment, missiles, electronic equipment, parts, supplies, technology and training--and defense services to foreign countries and areas under FMS and grant programs. The level of military deliveries for 1996 remains relatively consistent with the annual dollar value of military deliveries over the last ten years and most deliveries were to allied and coalition partners. In addition, the majority of these transfers, roughly 75 percent, were in support of equipment previously sold to countries by the USG, while the remaining percent of deliveries pertained to transfers of weapons system new to a particular country or area.

Defense articles and services delivered under Foreign Military Sales (FMS) totaled nearly $11.2 billion for the fiscal year and the United States provided military equipment and services to more than 150 countries and areas, mostly friends and allies. Eighty percent of the largest recipients were either European or Middle Eastern countries, although the European countries were in the bottom tier. Saudi Arabia was the largest recipient receiving $2.79 billion dollars worth of U.S. military exports and assistance last year. As mentioned earlier, the majority of these deliveries pertained to military items and services provided in support of previous transfers of weapons systems. Egypt placed second with $1.16 billion and was followed by Taiwan, Japan, Kuwait, Turkey, Spain, Germany, the Netherlands, and South Korea. Together, these countries and areas accounted for nearly $8.2 billion -- or close to 75 percent -- of all U.S. military deliveries in fiscal 1996.

FISCAL 1996 AUTHORIZATIONS FOR COMMERCIAL SALES OF DEFENSE ARTICLES AND DEFENSE SERVICES

Section A Overview

Total authorizations for fiscal 1996 were valued at $27 billion, representing approximately 46,00 individual U.S. Munitions List (USML) transactions licensed by the Department of State that may be provided commercially to foreign countries over the next four years (the customary period of validity for a U.S. munitions license, though authorization for agreements, as described below, may be for a longer duration). This volume is generally consistent with commercial defense trade involving the U.S. defense industry over the past several years.

USML authorizations involving U.S. defense articles and defense services are carefully restricted in accordance with the restraints and control measures specified in the Arms Export Control Act and the International Traffic in Arms Regulations, and in furtherance of the security objectives for the United States. Within this context, special importance is assigned to international defense cooperation between the United States and those countries to which it is allied. Accordingly, most defense trade involving USML items and technologies is limited to a relatively small number of friends and allies of the United States, and supports defense requirements and objectives of mutual concern.

During fiscal 1996, defense trade with seven countries (United Kingdom, Japan, Australia, Israel, Germany, Italy and Republic of Korea) accounted for 57 percent ($15.4 billion) of the total dollar value of all fiscal 1996 authorizations involving U.S. defense articles and defense services (figure 1).

Figure 1.

When defense trade with other member countries of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and with Egypt and the former European Neutrals (Austria, Finland, Ireland, Sweden and Switzerland) is included, the figure rises to approximately 80 percent of the value of all fiscal year 1996 approvals (figure 2).

Figure 2.

This concentration of U.S. defense trade with friends and allies is also evident at the regional level. Transfers to friends and allies in Western Europe and the Pacific account for most defense trade. Transfers involving the Middle East (including Israel, Egypt and Gulf Cooperation States) rank third, followed by Latin America and South Asia, while defense trade with Africa is very limited (figure 3).

Methodology

The information provided in this report is organized alphabetically by country. The categories used to describe the item(s) correspond generally to the twenty-one categories of articles, services and related technical data that have been designated as defense articles and defense services pursuant to sections 38 and 47(7) of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2778 and 2794(7)).

In certain cases, more detailed information about the type of article or services is included (e.g., F-16 spare parts). Usually, this is so when the license application request has been submitted electronically to the Department of State's Office of Defense Trade Controls. In recent years automation of munitions licensing, including electronic submission of license applications, has been emphasized by the Department in a cooperative program with the U.S. defense industry such that more than 40 percent of new license applications are now received and processed electronically.

Where relevant, the quantity for various authorizations has also been included. Quantities represent levels authorized for a four-year period. For many authorizations, however, it is not possible to quantify the defense articles or services. This is the case in authorizations involving software, components and spare parts, technical data, and several types of articles (e.g., military electronics and ammunition manufacturing equipment).

Defense services are typically the subject of a technical assistance agreement or a manufacturing license agreement involving multiple USML categories. For purposes of this report, the Department has provided, although not required by Section 655, the total number of such agreements and their total contract value for each country. The Department is seeking to upgrade its computer software for agreements such that, by the end of FY 1997, it will be possible to include more detailed information on the principal USML category and services covered. With the exception of such agreements, however, an entry appearing under quantity corresponds to the total number of such defense articles authorized under that category.

The term "various" under the list of destinations refers to multiple destinations, usually a large number of countries within a region or multiple countries to a particular transaction (e.g., an agreement providing for overhaul and repair of fighter aircraft based in NATO member states or for the distribution of aircraft spare parts to NATO member states). More than 60 percent of authorizations under the "various" category for fiscal year 1996 involves overseas warehousing and distribution arrangements by U.S. firms for non-military encryption products and services.

While munitions licenses are usually valid for a period of four years, the validity of technical assistance and manufacturing license agreements corresponds to the duration of the underlying contracts, which may be as brief as one year, but more often reflects longer periods (e.g., five or ten years), ordinarily determined by the expected duration of the specific program that is the subject of the agreement.

Section B Overview:

Based on information from a variety of sources, the level of military deliveries for 1996 remains relatively consistent with the annual dollar value of military deliveries over the last ten years and all deliveries were to allied and coalition partners. In addition, the majority of these transfers, roughly 75 percent, were in support of equipment previously sold to countries by the USG, while the remaining percent of deliveries pertained to transfers of weapons system new to a particular country or area.

Defense articles and services delivered under Foreign Military Sales (FMS) totaled nearly $12.7 billion for the fiscal year and the United States provided military equipment and services to more than 150 countries and areas, all friends and allies. Eighty percent of the largest recipients were either European or Middle Eastern countries, although the European countries were in the bottom tier. Saudi Arabia was the largest recipient receiving $2.94 billion dollars worth of U.S. military exports and assistance last year. As mentioned earlier, the majority of these deliveries pertained to military items and services provided in support of previous transfers of weapons systems. Egypt placed second with close to $1.3 billion and was followed by Taiwan, Japan, Kuwait, Turkey, Spain, Germany, the Netherlands, and South Korea. Together, these countries and areas accounted for $9.1 billion--or 72 percent--of all U.S. military deliveries in fiscal year 1996.

Regional FMS Deliveries

Authorizations for excess defense articles (EDA) emergency drawdowns, and international military education and training (IMET) totaled approximately $872.1 million, with $39 million allocated to training through IMET and the remaining $833.1 million to EDA and emergency drawdowns. Overall, the Middle East received the most of this grant aid ($388.3 million), followed by Europe approximately $246 million, and Latin American and the Caribbean $102.4 . By country, Egypt was the largest recipient, valued at $134.1 million, followed by Jordan, which received IMET, emergency drawdown equipment, and EDA valued at $114.5 million. Bosnia, receiving mostly emergency drawdown equipment and supplies, received $102 million in grant aid. (Figure 3)

Methodology:

There are several caveats that need to be made related to the data reported under FMS sales. First, the data provided by the Department of Defense includes figures related to deliveries, not authorized sales, of defense articles and services exported to foreign countries during the fiscal year. In addition, the total value of FMS deliveries includes the value of EDA transfers made under Foreign Military Sales. This pertains to Argentina ($67,989), Brazil ($4.8 million), Canada ($210,928), Costa Rica ($16,218), Greece ($664,964), Israel ($78,480), Italy ($147,848), Japan ($228,179), Korea ($230), NATO ($54,795), Spain ($7.4 million), Turkey ($169,740), and the United Kingdom ($9.3 million) for a grand total of $23 million. Furthermore, the quantity of certain defense articles, such as spare parts or ammunition, are not identified. Also, the values of defense services are represented. Finally, all data related to FMS sales are categorized alphabetically by country.

Pertaining to grant aid, all data is organized alphabetically by country. When provided by DOD, all quantities of military items that have been authorized for delivery are indicated. Emergency drawdown quantities represent the quantity of items that have been authorized by the USG for delivery. As with FMS sales, military services, such as IMET, are not quantified.

MILITARY ARTICLES IMPORTED WITH THE UNITED STATES FOR FISCAL 1996

Section C Overview:

Close to $373 million in defense articles were imported by the Department of Defense during fiscal 1996 to meet military procurement requirements while $226.8 million in military imports were calculated by the U.S. Customs Service and provided by the Census Bureau at the Department of Commerce. It should be noted that the figure reported by DoD pertains to prime contract values while a portion of the dollar value reported by DoC may reflect imports associated with sub-contracts related to a U.S. military procurement.

Imports from the United Kingdom, Canada, Israel, Sweden and Germany accounted for nearly 92 percent of the foreign military items purchased by the Department of Defense (DoD) during the fiscal year. The United Kingdom was the largest foreign supplier of foreign-manufactured items to the USG, furnishing $111.8 million worth of military equipment. These imports included mostly aircraft components, ADP software, guided missiles and remote control systems, and naval equipment. Canada provided almost $85 million to the USG in a variety of military equipment, including ADP software and components, aircraft components, engines and parts, and trucks. Israel furnished almost $71 million to the USG in military aircraft and guided missile components and ground vehicle parts. Sweden provided $55.8 million in military equipment and support, mostly in armaments and ground vehicle spares. Germany rounded out the top five foreign suppliers to DoD with almost $18 million worth of military items. (Figure 4)

Germany, Canada, the United Kingdom and Israel were the largest suppliers of military items imported mainly to private entities, according to records of the Department of Commerce for fiscal 1996. Germany was the largest foreign supplier, providing approximately $78 million in defense articles during last fiscal year, and was followed by Canada ($45 million), the United Kingdom ($41 million) and Israel ($22.3 million). Guided missile components armored fighting vehicles and components, machine guns, bombs and grenades, and newly manufactured helicopters constituted the largest value of military items imported. Again, private firms most certainly imported some items as a subcontractor for a U.S. military requirement, however, this value is not available as current recording procedures do not indicate purpose of import.

UNCLASSIFIED

Methodology:

The data provided by the Department of Defense includes military items imported into the United States specifically for the U.S. armed forces, while the Department of Commerce data provides information on military imports recorded at U.S. ports of entry, regardless of end-use. As such, some of the data provided by the U.S. Customs Service may also contain imports intended for the U.S. military, and therefore may also be reported in DOD's procurement data. Any military imports destined for a U.S. armed service that are not shipped directly to that particular entity, may be included in these figures.

As the Department of Commerce collates import figures on a calendar year basis, the fiscal year 1996 totals are calculated by adding the first portion of the Treasury data (pp1-42), which reflects monthly totals for October 1-December 31, 1995, and the second portion (pp.43-55), which reflects year to date totals from January 1 to September 30, 1996.

Section B Overview:

Based on information from a variety of sources, the level of military deliveries for 1996 remains relatively consistent with the annual dollar value of military deliveries over the last ten years and all deliveries were to allied and coalition partners. In addition, the majority of these transfers, roughly 75 percent, were in support of equipment previously sold to countries by the USG, while the remaining percent of deliveries pertained to transfers of weapons system new to a particular country or area.

Defense articles and services delivered under Foreign Military Sales (FMS) totaled nearly $12.7 billion for the fiscal year and the United States provided military equipment and services to more than 150 countries and areas, all friends and allies. Eighty percent of the largest recipients were either European or Middle Eastern countries, although the European countries were in the bottom tier. Saudi Arabia was the largest recipient receiving $2.94 billion dollars worth of U.S. military exports and assistance last year. As mentioned earlier, the majority of these deliveries pertained to military items and services provided in support of previous transfers of weapons systems. Egypt placed second with close to $1.3 billion and was followed by Taiwan, Japan, Kuwait, Turkey, Spain, Germany, the Netherlands, and South Korea. Together, these countries and areas accounted for $9.1 billion--or 72 percent--of all U.S. military deliveries in fiscal year 1996.

Regional FMS Deliveries

Authorizations for EDA, emergency drawdowns, and IMET totaled approximately $872.1 million, with $39 million allocated to training through IMET and the remaining $833.1 million to EDA and emergency drawdowns. Overall, the Middle East received the most of this grant aid ($388.8 million), followed by Europe (approximately $246 million), and Latin America and the Caribbean ($109.4 million). By country, Egypt was the largest recipient, valued at $134.1 million, followed by Jordan, which received IMET, emergency drawdown equipment, and EDA valued at $114.5 million. Bosnia, receiving mostly emergency drawdown equipment and supplies, received $102 million in grant aid. (Figure 3)

Methodology:

There are several caveats that need to be made related to the data reported under FMS sales. First, the data provided by the Department of Defense includes figures related to deliveries, not authorized sales, of defense articles and services exported to foreign countries during the fiscal year. In addition, the total value of FMS deliveries includes the value of EDA transfers made under Foreign Military Sales. This pertains to Argentina ($67,989), Brazil ($4.8 million), Canada ($210,928), Costa Rica ($16,218), Greece ($664,964), Israel ($78,480), Italy ($147,848), Japan ($228,179), Korea ($230), NATO ($54,795), Spain ($7.4 million), Turkey ($169,740), and the United Kingdom ($9.3 million) for a grand total of $23 million. Furthermore, the quantity of certain defense articles, such as spare parts or ammunition, are not identified. Also, the values of defense services are represented. Finally, all data related to FMS sales are categorized alphabetically by country.

Pertaining to grant aid, all data is organized alphabetically by country. When provided by DOD, all quantities of military items that have been authorized for delivery are indicated. Emergency drawdown quantities represent the quantity of items that have been authorized by the USG for delivery. As with FMS sales, military services, such as IMET, are not quantified.

Section C Overview:

Close to $373 million in defense articles were imported by the Department of Defense during fiscal year 1996 to meet military procurement requirements, while $226.8 million in military imports were calculated by the U.S. Customs Service and provided by the Census Bureau at the Department of Commerce. It should be noted that the figure reported by DoD pertains to prime contract values, while a portion of the dollar value reported by DoC may reflect imports associated with sub-contracts related to a U.S. military procurement.

Imports from the United Kingdom, Canada, Israel, Sweden, and Germany accounted for nearly 92 percent of the foreign military items purchased by the Department of Defense (DoD) during the fiscal year. The United Kingdom was the largest foreign supplier of foreign-manufactured items to the USG, furnishing $111.8 million worth of military equipment. These imports included mostly aircraft components, ADP software, guided missiles and remote control systems, and naval equipment. Canada provided almost $85 million to the USG in a variety of military equipment, including ADP software and components, aircraft components, engines and parts, and trucks. Israel furnished almost $71 million to the USG in military aircraft and guided missile components and ground vehicle parts. Sweden provided $55.8 million in military equipment and support, mostly in armaments and ground vehicle spares. Germany rounded out the top five foreign suppliers to DoD with almost $18 million worth of military items. (Figure 4)

Germany, Canada, the United Kingdom, and Israel were the largest suppliers of military items imported mainly to private entities, according to records of the Department of Commerce for fiscal year 1996. Germany was the largest foreign supplier, providing approximately $78 million in defense articles during last fiscal year, and was followed by Canada ($45 million), the United Kingdom ($41 million) and Israel ($22.3 million). Guided missile components, armored fighting vehicles and components, machine guns, bombs and grenades, and newly manufactured helicopters constituted the largest value of military items imported. Again, private firms most certainly imported some items as a subcontractor for a U.S. military requirement, however, this value is not available as current recording procedures do not indicate purpose of import.

Methodology:

The data provided by the Department of Defense includes military items imported into the United States specifically for the U.S. armed forces, while the Department of Commerce data provides information on military imports recorded at U.S. ports of entry, regardless of end-use. As such, some of the data provided by the U.S. Customs Service may also contain imports intended for the U.S. military, and therefore may also be reported in DOD's procurement data. Any military imports destined for a U.S. armed service that are not shipped directly to that particular entity, may be included in these figures.

As the Department of Commerce collates import figures on a calendar year basis, the fiscal year 1996 totals are calculated by adding the first portion of the Treasury data (pp1-42), which reflects monthly totals for October 1-December 31, 1995, and the second portion (pp.43-55), which reflects year to date totals from January 1 to September 30, 1996.
